July 2026 at a Glance

The Palm Beach County condo and townhome market continued its turn in July 2026. Closed sales rose 18.5% over July 2025 and active inventory fell 19.3%, cutting months of supply from 9.3 to 6.7 - the clearest absorption yet of the supply that built up through 2024-2025. The median sale price rose 4% to $312,500, and 57% of closings were all-cash purchases.

At 6.7 months of supply, buyers still hold leverage - a balanced market is generally considered about 5.5 months - but that leverage has narrowed sharply from 9.3 months a year ago. Sellers received 92.2% of original list price, nearly three points below what single family sellers achieved, which is where the remaining negotiating room sits.

If You Are Selling

The market is absorbing condo inventory again, but it is doing so selectively. Closed sales rose 18.5% while sellers still conceded about 8% from original list price, so pricing and building paperwork are doing more work than presentation alone.

- Inventory is down 19.3% year over year - the competition you were pricing against last summer has thinned
- Buildings with completed milestone inspections, funded reserves and stable fees are trading as a separate, stronger market
- 57% of buyers are paying cash - a building your buyer's lender will not approve narrows your pool to those buyers only
- Assemble the association documents before you list; a slow document request is where condo contracts stall

If You Are Buying

This is still the best buyer's window in Palm Beach County, and the data says it is closing. A 69-day median time to contract gives you time to do the diligence a condo purchase actually requires.

- At 6.7 months of supply you have genuine choice - but that is down from 9.3 months a year ago
- Sellers are conceding about 8% from original list on average, the widest gap of either property type
- Tell your lender the building name before you write; in a condo purchase the building has to qualify too
- Request reserves, meeting minutes, assessment history and inspection reports early - our free due-diligence checklist lists every document

What to Watch Through Fall 2026

The condo market is roughly a year behind the single family market in its cycle, and July's figures suggest it is closing that gap. Expect the split between buildings to widen rather than narrow: association health, insurance costs and inspection status now drive value more than square footage does. If absorption continues at July's pace, the buyer's window in Palm Beach County condos closes sometime in 2027 - sooner in the buildings with clean paperwork, later in those without.
