AT A GLANCE · SEPTEMBER 2026

The Market in 60 Seconds

There is less on the market than a year ago in both property types. Beyond that, single-family homes and condos/townhomes are behaving like two different markets. Here is September 2026 against September 2025, side by side.

Single-Family Homes

vs. September 2025

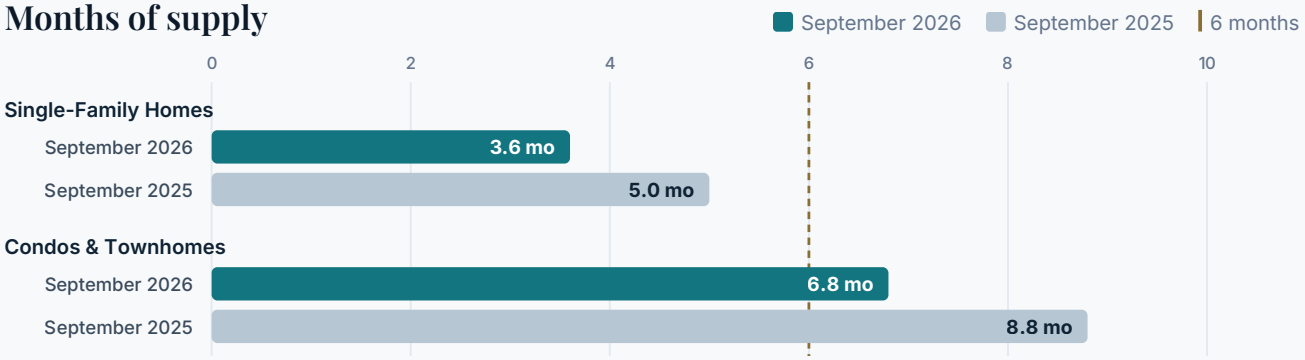

MEDIAN SALE PRICE	CLOSED SALES
$656,000	1,132
↑ +6.7% from $615,000	↓ −2.7% from 1,163
ACTIVE INVENTORY	MONTHS OF SUPPLY
4,481	3.6
↓ −19.6% from 5,576	↓ −28.0% from 5.0

Condos & Townhomes

vs. September 2025

MEDIAN SALE PRICE	CLOSED SALES
$310,000	782
↑ +3.3% from $300,000	↓ −4.3% from 817
ACTIVE INVENTORY	MONTHS OF SUPPLY
5,858	6.8
↓ −15.3% from 6,914	↓ −22.7% from 8.8

Months of supply

Months of supply = active inventory ÷ recent monthly sales pace. Lower means tighter supply. Roughly 6 months is widely used as a general reference point for a balanced market.

What stands out

1. Inventory is down in both property types. Active single-family listings fell 19.6% to 4,481 and condo/townhome listings fell 15.3% to 5,858, which pulled months of supply down on both sides.
2. Single-family supply at 3.6 months is seller-leaning. Homes went under contract in a median 43 days, down from 51, even though closed sales slipped 2.7%.
3. Condos and townhomes still offer more room at 6.8 months of supply, but less than they did: supply is down from 8.8 months and contract time fell from 65 days to 53.
4. Cash is a large share of both markets: 44.7% of single-family closings and 61.1% of condo/townhome closings were paid in cash (calculated from the reported counts).

FOR BUYERS

What This Means for Buyers

The data points to a firmer single-family market and a condo/townhome market that still leaves room to negotiate, though less than a year ago. How you prepare depends on which one you are shopping.

Single-Family Homes

3.6	43	94.7%
MONTHS OF SUPPLY	MEDIAN DAYS TO CONTRACT	OF ORIGINAL LIST PRICE

- Expect less to choose from.
  Active single-family inventory is 4,481, down 19.6% from 5,576 a year ago. Set up alerts early and tour new listings promptly.
- Be ready before you find the one.
  Median days to contract is 43, down from 51. Have a current pre-approval (or proof of funds), and decide in advance what matters most in inspection and appraisal terms.
- Expect a gap between list price and sale price.
  The typical sale closed at 94.7% of its original list price. Use recent closed sales, not asking prices, to judge where an offer should start.
- You may be competing with cash.
  44.7% of single-family closings were cash (calculated). Financed buyers can compete on clean terms: solid pre-approval, reasonable timelines and a meaningful deposit.

Condos & Townhomes

6.8	53	93.2%
MONTHS OF SUPPLY	MEDIAN DAYS TO CONTRACT	OF ORIGINAL LIST PRICE

- You generally have more room here than on a house.
  At 6.8 months of supply against 3.6 for single-family, and a 53-day median to contract, there is usually room to ask for a price adjustment, credits or repairs.
- That leverage is shrinking.
  Supply fell from 8.8 to 6.8 months, inventory dropped 15.3%, and contract time came down from 65 days to 53. The best-priced units in well-run buildings may not wait.
- Use the time for due diligence.
  Review the association budget, reserves, recent and planned assessments, and inspection records before you commit. The price is only part of the cost of a condo.
- Financing needs an early check.
  61.1% of condo/townhome closings were cash (calculated). If you are financing, confirm early that your lender will lend in the specific building.

FOR SELLERS

What This Means for Sellers

Buyers are still paying below original list price in both segments, which makes the first price you choose one of the most important decisions you make.

Single-Family Homes

3.6	43	94.7%
MONTHS OF SUPPLY	MEDIAN DAYS TO CONTRACT	OF ORIGINAL LIST PRICE

- Supply favors you. Pricing decides the outcome. At 3.6 months of supply, down from 5.0, well-priced homes are going under contract in a median 43 days. That speed tends to reward homes priced to recent closed sales.
- Price from closed sales, not list prices. The typical sale closed at 94.7% of its original list price. Last year's prices and a neighbor's asking price are weak guides. A price that starts too high often has to come down later, after the listing has lost its first wave of attention.
- Prepare for a well-qualified buyer. 44.7% of single-family closings were cash (calculated). Having disclosures, permits and recent service records ready makes it easier for any buyer, cash or financed, to move quickly.
- Presentation still matters. Fewer closed sales (1,132 vs. 1,163) means each buyer is choosing carefully. Repairs, cleaning and professional photography help your home compete.

Condos & Townhomes

6.8	53	93.2%
MONTHS OF SUPPLY	MEDIAN DAYS TO CONTRACT	OF ORIGINAL LIST PRICE

- Plan for negotiation, but a shorter runway than last year. At 6.8 months of supply most buyers will expect room to negotiate. Median days to contract fell from 65 to 53, so a well-priced unit should not sit as long as it would have in September 2025.
- A higher median does not close the list-price gap. Supply is down from 8.8 months and the median price rose 3.3% to $310,000, yet the typical sale still closed at 93.2% of original list price.
- Have building paperwork ready on day one. Budget, reserves, assessment history, insurance and inspection status are what serious condo buyers ask about first. Gathering them early prevents delays after you accept an offer.
- Cash buyers are a large share of this market. 61.1% of condo/townhome closings were cash (calculated). Clear terms and a straightforward closing timeline appeal to these buyers.
